The Power of COMMUNITY
Brandywine Health Foundation 2009 Community Report
Dear friends and supporters,

“A picture paints a thousand words.” We were thrilled to see the new Brandywine Center in the middle of John Moore’s beautiful new painting “Fine Fall Day.” It symbolized to us that, after just eight short years, the work of the Brandywine Health Foundation is now fully integrated into the Coatesville landscape.

We present this year’s report to you, our Brandywine Health Foundation community, with optimism about the future tempered by the sober realization that now is a time of great need. Recent economic events require that we all stretch our own resources to our families, our schedules and our pocketbooks. You have many opportunities to give back to the community and we are grateful you have chosen to entrust the foundation with your precious time and financial support.

With the community’s growing support for our work over the last eight years, the foundation has invested in a new health care provider for Coatesville, garnered significant funding to improve oral health and behavioral health services, and built the new Brandywine Center. Thanks to you, the generous businesses and foundations in the Philadelphia area, and our elected officials, we were able to take these ambitious steps, investing over $7.6 million in giant leaps forward for our community.

Just 15 months ago, the foundation’s board of directors took another step forward. With a keen understanding of how youth programs today affect the health of a community in the near and long term, we led a community effort to explore a broader range of ways we could help young people in the Coatesville, Area School District grow into healthy, productive adults. Our intent from the beginning was not to add another isolated effort, but instead to understand and synthesize the efforts already being made and to identify the gaps that exist. In the midst of this exploration of expanding our investments in the Coatesville community, we watched as the economic downturn reduced the foundation’s pool of funds to reinvest at a time when the need for funds in the community and among some of our partners dramatically increased.

Although the stock market turned around in March, the foundation has not recovered the asset base it had in 2008. We responded by cutting administrative costs where possible and focusing more tightly on our original core purpose: to improve access to health care for those with little or no insurance in the greater Coatesville area.

Thank you for your generosity that has enabled us to meet our commitments to organizations such as Ches/Penn Health Services, Community Dental, and the Maternal and Child Health Consortium. In addition, through the support of the William Penn Foundation, Acceler8Mental, the United Way of Chester County and the Chester County District Attorney’s Office, we have been able to complete the Community Plan for the Coatesville Youth Initiative (see page 3).

We remain committed to serving as a catalyst for improvement in our community’s health. Your faith in this important work is humbling and is our motivation every day. Thank you.

Update on 2008 Grant to the Chester County Trauma Services Task Force

Launched by recently retired foundation board member Congressman Jim Gerlach, chaired by retired State Rep. Carole Rubly, and actively supported by the foundation, the Chester County Trauma Services Task Force declared a tentative victory this year when Paoli Hospital announced it would open a Level II Trauma Center next year. Their announcement follows an ambitious 18-month campaign conducted by the Task Force called “It’s about time... to talk about a trauma center in Chester County,” which included a survey of residents. That survey showed that 85 percent of respondents believe that a trauma center should be located in the county; pending the Commonwealth’s approval process, they’ll get their wish.

In public settings and private conversations, Americans are asking how we can improve our nation’s health care system. How can we bring our health care outcome statistics up to those of other developed countries, while managing skyrocketing costs and ensuring coverage for every American? While we educate our elected officials about the needs in our communities, millions of uninsured people can’t wait for them to arrive at solutions that have been debated for decades.

As individuals who care and a charity with an obligation to deliver solutions faster, we have worked together for the past eight years to build a foundation for health care access in Coatesville. This year in particular we have seen how that hard work and perseverance—as well as your generosity—have paid off in the dramatic increase in patient numbers seen by ChesPenn and Community Dental as well as Child Guidance Resource Centers.

During this fiscal year, more than 7,000 people walked through the doors of the Brandywine Center. Not only were they provided with a variety of services, such as the management of chronic diseases like asthma and diabetes, but also they gained access to educational and preventive programs such as smoking cessation and prostate cancer detection. These routine examinations and preventive care programs are the key to a healthier population over the long-term.

A new contractual relationship between ChesPenn and The Chester County Hospital enables local women to access quality prenatal care from experienced local obstetrician Dr. Christine Lyons, pictured above, in the Brandywine Center, and then to deliver at the local hospital with a full range of obstetric and neonatal services. Sadly, the need in the community and the inefficiency of our nation’s health care system leave both ChesPenn and Community Dental struggling to balance their budgets.

According to the National Association of Community Health Centers, a year of visits to a center such as ChesPenn costs the same as a single visit to an emergency room. The association estimates that increased funding for health centers could save as much as $18 billion annually in U.S. health care costs. Patients at the centers receive both preventive care they might otherwise miss and ongoing treatment, resulting in improved long-term health.

The shocking truth is that 40 million American children do not receive preventive medical or dental care. Access to behavioral health services is even more problematic. The Brandywine Center’s agencies have been working non-stop to inform families about their accessibility and affordability. For the second year in a row, the agencies sponsored a community Block Party, with hundreds turning out to receive information about health care, to get blood pressure and other health screenings and to enjoy a day of fun and entertainment. Working in concert with health service providers in the Coatesville Center for Community Health and others such as the Chester County Blind Association, they have formed a safety net for those in need, regardless of race, ethnicity, income level or insurance status.

The shocking truth is that 40 million American children do not receive preventive medical or dental care.

This year, in recognition of the valuable role community health centers play in meeting the health needs of the uninsured and underinsured, federal stimulus dollars enabled ChesPenn to expand physician hours. Now with additional space to provide care since their move into the Brandywine Center, ChesPenn is better able to meet the increased need for services resulting from the economic downturn. These cost-effective health care dollars would not be coming into the Coatesville community if ChesPenn were not here.

Again, the foundation’s original investment has paid off in an improved network of health services poised to meet the increased needs of the community—and also ready to respond to changes and challenges health care reform will bring.
When the arsonists in Coatesville destroyed an entire block of Fleetwood Street, the response of the foundation’s board of directors was immediate: provide the first major contribution—a $10,000 gift—to Citadel Federal Credit Union’s just established emergency fund. Other individuals, businesses and foundations followed suit, resulting in a community-wide outpouring of generosity and care for those families who had been burned out of their homes.

As the FBI, District Attorney’s Office and local police worked overnight to identify the perpetrators, the Coatesville Ministerium, nonprofit organizations including the Red Cross and local CYWA, and government agencies found new homes for the residents, collected food and clothing, and helped the victims find ways to get back on their feet.

With an eye for preventing further fires, ArcelorMittal stepped forward with a $5,000 donation to the Brandywine Health Foundation, which enabled the purchase of 1,500 smoke detectors and batteries. These were distributed door to door by local volunteer fire fighters in the City of Coatesville, East Fallowfield, Modena, South Coatesville and Valley Township. Flyers advertising the program were distributed throughout the community, at events including the Strawberry Festival, and taken home by children in the elementary and middle schools of the Coatesville Area School District. Leading the effort were the fire departments of Coatesville, West End, Westwood, Washington Hose and Modena.

These inspiring responders were recognized at the 2009 Brandywine Center Block Party as Unsung Heroes: the American Red Cross, ArcelorMittal, Chester County Department of Community Development, Citadel Federal Credit Union, City of Coatesville, Coatesville Ministerium, Crime Victims Center of Chester County, CYWA, Holiday Inn (Exton), Human Services’ Building Bridges Program and the United Way of Chester County.

The arsons had an already struggling community terrorized; the fast and immediate response gave everyone hope that a brighter future was around the corner.
The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Commission to Build a Healthier America traveled the country last year, studying “the social determinants of health,” or how where we live and work affects our health status. The group found that the health of Americans differs depending upon income, race and education level.

The study showed that, regardless of racial or ethnic group, “education is linked to health.”

In Pennsylvania, 29.2 percent of college graduates report that they are in less than very good health, while 69.7 percent of those failing to graduate from high school are in the same category. This education gap also impacts the next generation: Pennsylvania ranks 40th among states in infant mortality in relationship to maternal education level: 6.8 deaths per 1,000 live births to women with lower education—compared to 4 deaths per 1,000 live births to the state’s most educated mothers.

According to the study, “College graduates can expect to live five years longer than those who do not complete high school.”

We’re proud that the Brandywine Health Foundation has spearheaded the development of a network of health services in Coatesville to increase access to care. We also recognize the broader socioeconomic factors that affect youth and their health. The foundation has supported early childhood development with grants to the Maternal and Child Health Consortium and the Nurse-Family Partnership. In addition, funding was provided for Drs. Tammy James and Bethann Cinelli of West Chester University to assist the Coatesville Area School District with creating a healthy environment in the district’s elementary schools.

But what about young people ages 12 to 24? How can we help them make the choices and get the education that will improve their long-term health as adults?

Encouraged by leaders of Coatesville youth-serving agencies, the foundation hired Urban Ventures Group Inc. to lead the community through a year-long planning process to answer that question. Generously funding the effort were the William Penn Foundation, ArcelorMittal, the United Way of Chester County and the Chester County District Attorney’s Office.

The Coatesville Youth Initiative was led by Harry Lewis, foundation board vice president and retired principal of Coatesville Area High School. The committee members collected relevant data, interviewed community leaders, listened to residents and youth in focus groups, and learned about other youth development efforts like Chester’s Youth Collaborative and

The Garage in Kennett Square. The resulting plan was unveiled at a public meeting in October and is available online at www.brandywinefoundation.org.

Initiative Director Chaya Scott will lead a Youth Advisory Board and committees of community members that will work on four program areas:

- Pathways Beyond High School: Helping young people graduate from high school with a plan for additional education or employment;
- Greater Parental Engagement: Establishing a network of supports and resources for adults, parents and grandparents to build stronger relationships with youth;
- Mentoring Relationships with Adults: Building relationships with youth to provide guidance and support; and
- Optimized Resources Through Better Program Coordination: Creating a network of youth organizations and programs with coordinated communications and scheduling and improved service delivery.
Hundreds of dedicated volunteers, business and community leaders and donors gave tirelessly in support of the foundation’s work and the community. Among these people are more than 50 remarkable volunteers who support the Brandywine Consignment Shop on Route 113 in Downingtown. The shop has donated an extraordinary total of over $224,000 in the last eight years.

The “Battle of the Berries at Brandywine,” sponsored by Freedom Village at Brandywine took place on May 20 at the Brandywine Health Foundation’s 7th annual Garden Party at HougghnnM, the home of Jeff Seder and Nina Burnaford in Coatesville. Seven area restaurants donated their time and talents and went toque to toque for best dessert. The winning confection, voted on by 400 guests, was a triple-berry bread pudding from the Blue Cafe in Downingtown. The party, co-chaired by Mary Holleran and Kathy Lovell, and the annual Strawberry Festival, co-chaired by Chris Sello and Stephanie Waite, raised a combined total of more than $170,000 in net contributions for the community. The festival, held on the grounds of Brandywine Hospital and co-presented by the hospital and Harleysville National Bank, drew record crowds of more than 25,000 people.

There are no words to express the foundation’s gratitude. Thank you to all of the volunteers and donors who make this work possible. Please visit www.brandywinefoundation.org for a complete list of these generous volunteers.

INVESTMENT POLICY: It is the Brandywine Health Foundation’s policy to invest funds with an asset mix of 75 percent equities and 25 percent fixed instruments and cash. A volunteer committee of experienced business managers, chaired by Treasurer David England, regularly reviews the foundation’s financial statements and portfolio, evaluating the performance of our investment managers, trustees and auditors. The committee’s investment strategy is designed to protect the foundation’s current and long-term benefit to the community by balancing the goal of growing to meet future need while prudently minimizing risk.

AUDIT COMMITTEE: The foundation’s Audit Committee is an independent group of volunteers, chaired by former County Comptroller and current Commissioner Carol Aichele, joined by three experienced accountants who do not serve on the Board of Directors. It is this Committee’s responsibility to hire, evaluate and oversee the work of the foundation’s auditors, Maille, Falconiero LLP, independent of the Board of Directors, the President & CEO, and the staff accountant.

NOTE TO THE STATEMENT OF FINANCIAL POSITION: Loans Receivable to Brandywine Health & Housing, LP represent funds borrowed and due to the foundation for the development of the Brandywine Center, and a loan to the BHS Transitional Corporation for the resolution of business issues; this latter loan will be repaid from the proceeds of a property sale. Grants Payable includes a commitment to ChesPenn Health Services over the next four years.

NOTE TO THE STATEMENT OF ACTIVITIES: In 2008 and 2009, Support and Revenue were significantly impacted by the stock market’s reversal. Program Services in 2008 includes the commitment of $2 million to ChesPenn Health Services through June, 2013, recorded on an accrual basis.

ADDITIONAL NOTE: Funds held by the BHS Transitional Corporation are housed at TD North Bank. These funds are used to repay certain financial obligations of Brandywine Hospital prior to its sale to Community Health Systems. All funds remaining at BHS after the resolution of these issues will be donated to the foundation.
The Brandywine Health Foundation realizes the importance of taking a leadership role as a convener, collaborator and catalyst for change. We must make sure that every person in our community has complete access to high-quality health care, and that young people grow up in a healthy, safe environment where they have every opportunity to live long, productive lives. Thanks to the unparalleled commitment of the following individuals, organizations and businesses giving gifts to the foundation between July 1, 2008 – June 30, 2009, we continue to build on the successes of just eight short years.

Dear friends and supporters,

“A picture paints a thousand words.” We were thrilled to see the new Brandywine Center in the middle of John Moore’s beautiful new painting “Fine Fall Day.” It symbolized to us that, after just eight short years, the work of the Brandywine Health Foundation is now fully integrated into the Coatesville landscape.

We present this year’s report to you, our Brandywine Health Foundation community, with optimism about the future tempered by the sober realization that now is a time of great need. Recent economic events require that we all stretch our schedules and our pocketbooks. You have many opportunities to give back to the community and we are grateful you have chosen to entrust the foundation with your precious time and financial support.

With the community’s growing support for our work over the last eight years, the foundation has invested in a new health care provider for Coatesville, granted significant funding to improve oral health and behavioral health services, and built the new Brandywine Center. Thanks to you, the generous businesses and foundations in the Philadelphia area, and our elected officials, we were able to take these ambitious steps, investing over $7.6 million in giant leaps forward for our community.

Just 15 months ago, the foundation’s board of directors took another step forward. With a keen understanding of how youth programs today affect the health of a community in the near and long term, we led a community effort to explore a broader range of ways we could help young people in the Coatesville, Area School District grow into healthy, productive adults. Our intent from the beginning was not to add another isolated effort, but instead to understand and synchronize the efforts already built and to identify the gaps that exist. In the midst of this exploration of expanding our investments in the Coatesville community, we watched as the economic downturn reduced the foundation’s pool of funds to reinvest at a time when the need for funds in the community and among some of our partners dramatically increased.

Although the stock market turned around in March, the foundation has not recovered the asset base it had in 2008. We responded by cutting administrative costs where possible and focusing more tightly on our original core purpose: to improve access to health care for those with little or no insurance in the greater Coatesville area. Thanks to your generosity, we have been able to meet our commitments to organizations such as ChesPenn Health Services, Community Dental, and the Maternal and Child Health Consortium. In addition, through the support of the William Penn Foundation, Acelera HBH, the United Way of Chester County and the Chester County District Attorney’s Office, we have been able to complete the Community Plan for the Coatesville Youth Initiative (see page 3).

We remain committed to serving as a catalyst for improvement in our community’s health. Your faith in this important work is humbling and is our motivation every day. Thank you.

Update on 2008 Grant to the Chester County Trauma Services Task Force

Launched by recently retired foundation board member Congressman Jim Gerlach, chaired by retired State Rep. Carol Rubley, and actively supported by the foundation, the Chester County Trauma Services Task Force declared a tentative victory this year when Paoli Hospital announced it would open a Level III Trauma Center next year. Their announcement follows an ambitious 18-month campaign conducted by the Task Force called “It’s about time... to talk about a trauma center in Chester County,” which included a survey of residents. That survey showed that 85 percent of respondents believe that a trauma center should be located in the county; pending the Commonwealth’s approval process, they’ll get their wish.
